Residents of Orlando now have a new place to call home away from home. The Chickasaw Branch Library at 870 N. Chickasaw Trail is the latest innovation at the Orange County Library System. Conveniently located off the 408 East, the Chickasaw Branch is the new standard in modern libraries. It features contemporary design inside and out as well as eco-friendly lighting, amazing programming spaces, comfortable spots for using technology and nooks for reading.

Excitement has been building for the new location, the 16th in the library system. Library Director Mary Anne Hodel says, “Libraries are educational institutions designed to present experiences and learning opportunities to students of all ages, and embrace the entire community.” Hodel promises the new location will be all that and more.

As patrons enter the branch, a digital billboard displays the line-up of upcoming events. At the entrance to the Children’s Department, kids can play on colorful gel steps that swish and swirl on contact. Children can develop early learning skills at AWE stations featuring fun, educational games and activities in English and Spanish. There are ample tables and chairs for library programs plus a patio with bright yellow sunshades that weaves the outdoors into the library experience. A living room-style reading area overlooks Chickasaw Trail and provides a comfy place to take in the latest bestseller.

The Chickasaw Branch also includes a sophisticated stage area for events such as concerts, dance performances and lectures. Wifi is available for customers along with charging bars for mobile devices. An OverDrive Media Station allows patrons to learn about available digital collections.

Computer classes are offered in the fully equipped technology classroom and there’s a Fab Lab maker space that provides STEM-based educational programs for children.
