FROM THE DIRECTOR

There’s nothing that can prepare a community for a tragedy like the one that struck Orlando in the early morning hours of June 12. Nobody expects a horrific act of violence to take place in their own backyard. But when the news broke that Pulse nightclub was the scene of the biggest mass shooting in United States history, our community did not hesitate. Volunteers brought supplies to first responders and comfort to survivors. Our mental health community offered free grief counseling to those who needed it, businesses donated goods and services, and community groups organized vigils and memorials.

Since libraries are community gathering places where people can seek not just information but also social interaction, companionship and a sense of belonging, the Orange County Library System also leapt to action to show solidarity with the community. We assembled a resource guide to help those trying to cope with this tragedy. We let our employees know that if they wished to donate blood, we would do our best to adjust their schedules to make it possible. Our staff association collected supplies, which were donated to the Center Orlando’s GLBT community organization. Our branches, many of which had already created GLBT book displays for the month of June, hung banners with the hashtag #OrlandoUnited as a show of support and unity.

We were also moved by the outpouring of support we received from around the world for Orlando and for our library family, some of whom lost loved ones in the attack. We received tweets from as far away as England, Los Angeles and New York, a donation of electronic books on grieving to share with patrons from ebook provider OverDrive and a cash donation from library-software provider SirsiDynix. The American Library Association, which hosted its annual conference in Orlando from June 23-28, scheduled sessions on the importance of fostering inclusive communities and held a vigil for the victims of the attack.

It has been a trying time, but it has also been a moving time – one that has shown us just how strong we can be when we pull together in times of need. The Orange County Library System couldn’t be prouder to call itself part of this phenomenal community. We are #OrlandoUnited.

In January 2015, I was honored that the Orange County Library System selected me to become branch manager of the soon-to-be-open Chickasaw Branch Library. We had a lot of hard work ahead of us before we could open our doors, but on July 18, 2015—after lots of hard work and preparation—we finally opened. We were honored that 1,500 people visited the branch that day to see all that we had to offer!

It is hard to believe that we have now been open for a full year, and we’re proud of what we have accomplished. The Chickasaw Branch is a progressive place where people can come to develop important skills and learn new things.

We offer free technology classes in Spanish and English, we have a lab where you can learn about 3D printing and basic electronics, and we offer preparation for the Naturalization exam through our Citizenship Inspired series. English language instruction is in high demand, so we hold classes on multiple days and times during the week, and we have a language lab for online learning that’s open whenever we are not teaching classes. Recently, people have requested classes for learning Spanish, so we now offer a basic Spanish class as well.

We want the community to feel like the Chickasaw Branch is a comfortable place—a home-away-from-home. Inside the library, we have a beautiful living room area with colorful, comfortable furniture for relaxing and reading. Our skylights and large windows let in an abundance of natural light and provide a view to the outdoors. We also have two outdoor decks with plenty of seating and tables. Around the branch, we have art on display from local sculptors and painters.

We also host events for everyone—we have everything from dancing to lectures to live music and cultural performances on our performance stage. My staff and I take great pride in welcoming you every time you visit. This is your library. If you haven’t visited us yet, come check us out!

On July 16, we will hold our First Anniversary Celebration. I hope to see you there and I look forward to hearing what you have to say about the Chickasaw Branch Library.
