We just finished an exciting month here at the Orange County Library System, so before we start looking at all the great events we have in store for you in March, let's take a minute to look back at one of our highlights from February.

The Melrose Center turned three years old this year, so on February 11 we celebrated the milestone with the Melrose Creative Expo, an open-house event featuring demonstrations, music, vendors and the annual Melrose Awards, which honor creative projects made using the center's resources. The event was a smashing success – more than 1,300 people stopped by to try out virtual-reality games, play with robots, meet the Tourist City Ghostbusters and more. During the Expo, we also awarded $1,000 to the grand prize Melrose Award winner. See page 23 to find out who took the honors!

In March, we recognize Women’s History Month with a great slate of events that honor the determination and hard work of women who spent their lives proving their mettle. Mary Bush Shipko, author of Aviatrix: First Woman Pilot for Hughes, Amstel, will visit the Orlando Public Library to discuss her work as a woman airline pilot in the 1970s. Dr. Naima Johnston Bush will stop by the South Trail Branch for She Steps to the Mic, which explores the role of groundbreaking women in hip-hop and rap music. For more Women’s History Month at the library, see pages 18-19.

We also have some great author events coming up as part of the Sunshine State Author Series, which brings children’s and young adult authors to Orlando for book signings, discussions, readings and workshops. We’re excited to welcome Jackson Pearce, author of Pip Bartlett’s Guide to Magical Creatures, to visit our libraries to talk about her work. See page 33 for dates, times and locations.

Don’t forget to visit our website at ocls.info or follow us on Facebook to keep up with all the events happening at a branch near you!
Folksongs from the Little House on the Prairie

Orlando Public Library, Library Central
Saturday, March 4, 11 a.m.
Laura Ingalls Wilder’s classic Little House on the Prairie book series has become a part of American literature and folklore. Many of these well-known (and not so well-known) folk songs are sung by the family in Wilder’s books. For more information, visit folksinging.org.

Everybody knows that libraries offer storytimes for kids—but what about the grownups? We can’t let kids have all the fun, so the Orange County Library System has launched a new event called Storytime for Grownups, an interactive storytime session for adults. Communicating through storytelling is an age-old art. It has been used since ancient times to teach lessons, spread news and bring communities together. Storytellers can bring history to life and engage your imagination. They can also bring a much-needed smile to your face with a humorous tale or turn of phrase.

The Orange County Library System’s experienced storytellers bring their own twist to the craft and present stories based on a new theme each month.

During March, we present Story Tours, and our theme is My Wild Irish Roses: Heroines of Irish Folklore. These tales will transport you to the lush green landscape of the Emerald Isle. Let us entertain you with stories of Irish maidens, fairies and princesses and then try your own hand at spinning the malarkey.

The world has always had legendary women warriors, innovative female artists and powerful queens. But most women’s names are lost to history, because until very recently, females had limited roles in public life, and often had little control over their own lives. During the past 100 years, however, women have been making up for lost time. Since U.S. women won the right to vote in 1920, their lives have changed radically. Today’s women are students, activists, business leaders, scientists, athletes, politicians, Nobel prize winners and more. As women’s opportunities expanded, so too has their influence. Women today can be at the forefront of public life, including fighting for social justice, marching for equality and working in many different ways to ensure a better world for all. The notion that women’s rights are human rights no longer seems so radical, and today’s little girls truly believe that they can do anything.

Women’s History Month is a time to applaud the achievements of all women—our mothers, grandmothers and the mothers who came before them. During the month of March, we acknowledge the accomplishments of those women who made it into the history books as well as the many more whose labors went unrecognized by society.

The Orange County Library System’s guide to Women’s History Month, ocls.info/womenshistory, is full of resources about amazing females whose contributions made a significant impact upon the world. It includes biographies of specific women who shaped history, books and DVDs about women’s rights today and links to library databases, websites and mobile resources. From Uppity Women of Medieval Times to Rad Women Worldwide, all books are available for home delivery from the library.

Order one today and celebrate the powerful women who made history and continue to make history today!
